

Tell 7-Eleven

It's Too
HIGH a PRICE to PAY for FUEL

Southern California families are already paying too much for gasoline. So why is 7-Eleven making a bad situation worse?

7-Eleven uses a fuel transporter, KAG West, with a plan to destroy Southern California families' best defense against a bad economy—good jobs. At a time when working families have it hard enough, 7-Eleven's fuel transporter is trying to intimidate its workers by intentionally blocking contract negotiations and targeting union workers by paying them less than every other company employee. KAG West is not serious about bargaining a fair contract for these workers who perform a very dangerous and skilled job delivering fuel in Southern California.

7-Eleven: Fueling Misery

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TEAMSTERS

This handbill does not ask nor intend to ask any employee to cease work or deliveries.